

Let's Get Acquainted

Don Brown was born Sept. 23, 1938, in Omaha, Nebraska. His parents were Martin Bertolini and Virginia Union; they were divorced later on. Don has one brother, David.

Don was raised in Omaha, Neb. and graduated from Omaha Technical High in 1956. He went into the Navy shortly after that and was stationed in Hawaii, in the Aviation branch of the Navy; he flew to other countries in the Far East — mainly Japan. He received his discharge in 1959.

Don returned to Omaha and attended Creighton University one year. He married Carol Conley, from this marriage there was a son, Dana Brown; they were later divorced in 1963 and Don continued working until he left Omaha to live in California in 1967.

Don found work as a Computer Programmer; he worked for Mattel Toys for 10 years, then for American Honda for three years before leaving California.

In March of 1969, Don met Ellan Dilley on her first day of work; they were married on July 4, 1969.

Ellan Dilley was born in San Francisco, Calif., she was the third of six children born to Paul and Edna Laird Dilley. When she was very young, the family moved to Southern California, near Los Angeles; they lived in that area until she was in high school, then they moved north to Paradise, Calif. She laughed and said, "There aren't too many people in Heber who can say they have lived in Paradise."

Ellan Dilley married John Gast when she was fifteen and quit school to make a home. To them were born four children, John, Brian, Rhea and Kelley.

Ellan worked on the police force for five years, but quit to have her family and care for them. Then she became a nurse's aid. Eventually, she was supervisor over nurse's aids in a convalescent hospital. She said that she really enjoyed working with the elderly patients.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Brown

When the hospital was sold, she moved back to Los Angeles and went to work for Nashua Corp. as a printer. She ran a printing press, making advertising labels. She worked there for fourteen years.

After she and Don were married, he helped her raise the four children, they also raised the first grandchild, Patrick Gast, whom they love as their own.

After Don met Ellan, he became interested in the L.D.S. Church and was baptized. They have both been active in church work since that time. Don has held the position of Assistant Ward Clerk, then twice was Ward Clerk, he is now the Heber 9th Ward Secretary.

Ellan and Don Brown had planned to work and live in California until time for retirement, but they came to visit their youngest daughter, Kelley and her husband, Reed Clyde. Reed is the son of Connie and Neil Clyde. Reed is the grandson of Willis Clyde. I mention his relationship this way so all of us (old and young) can make the family connection.

When Don and Ellan saw the Heber Valley, they knew that they wanted to live here and they didn't want to wait for retirement. Don found work in Salt Lake as a Computer Programmer for the State of Utah, and they rented a house in Heber First Ward. After living there a year, they bought a nice, roomy mobil home and moved into the 9th Ward.

They are happy to live in Heber City and they thoroughly enjoy the change of the seasons.

We sincerely wish Ellan, Don and Patrick many years of continued happiness here in the

Well Child Conference

The Wasatch City-County Health Department is pleased to announce a new service: Well Child Conferences.

The purpose of a Well Child Conference is to prevent health problems through periodic physical and developmental assessments, health education, and immunizations.

Immunizations are provided by a pediatrician for children from birth to 18 years of age. Clinics are held on Wednesdays and the child must have an appointment.

Fees are charged according to family income with the service provided primarily toward those children who are not under the care of a private physician.

The value of Well Child Clinics is to detect possible problems when correction is usually easier and less costly. Children known to be ill should be seen by their family doctor.

For more information or an appointment call the Wasatch County Health Department, 2700.
